1. On July 28, the UN General Assembly passed a resolution recognizing the human right to water and sanitation, with 124 states voting in favour, none opposed and 42, including Canada, abstaining. Do you support the official legal recognition of water as a human right?

Yes

I firmly believe that having a safe supply of potable water is a basic right of everyone.

2. Do you believe that the provincial water allocation system should be designed to prioritize basic human needs and ecosystem health while respecting treaty obligations to First Nations?

Yes

Water is a basic need of everything living thing on this planet. If we destroy or damage a water source we are only hurting ourselves.

3. Based on your current level of knowledge of the issue, are you in favour of the province's direction towards a water allocation system which would allocate water according to ability to pay and leave the market to determine access to water resources for all users?

No

4. Do you think that municipal leaders and Albertans have been sufficiently informed about and consulted on the allocation review and the various policy options available?

No

Prior to reading your documentation I was totally unaware that the Alberta Government was doing this.

5. If elected will you publicly call for broad-based consultations on the allocation review, which fully and meaningfully explore all policy options, not just market-based options, for updating the Water Act before the provincial government introduces any changes to the legislation?

Yes

Catherine Crozier is the only Redcliff candidate to complete this survey.
